

Economic structure

Industrialisation has a long history in Central Hesse. Even today, Central Hesse has the highest percentage of industrial operations in all of Hesse. The main production sector, comprising mechanical, metal and electrical engineering, makes up a significant part of Central Hesse's economic structure. The companies representing this sector have enjoyed great success for many years, thanks mainly to the region's high degree of innovation potential. Central Hesse concentrates on its strong points. Structures already in place are continuously expanded, thus forming the driving force behind the region's economic development for the years to come.

For companies of all sizes, this means less bureaucracy and less administration, more available industrial real estate (especially in new business centres) as well as more individual consulting services and business-development opportunities, all of which makes it easier for entrepreneurs and business start-ups to realise their ideas as quickly as possible. After all: "The sooner, the better!"
